2011 Annual Convention and Scientific Assembly

LEONARD WEATHER, JR., R.PH., M.D.
111TH PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

July 23-27, 2011 • Washington, District of Columbia
WALTER E. WASHINGTON CONVENTION CENTER

Patients Supporting Communities People Who Care Innovation

AstraZeneca creates innovative medicines that improve the lives of millions worldwide. But we stand for much more. We listen to patients. We help those in need afford their medicines. We offer the Cancer Study Locator to help cancer patients and physicians identify clinical trial options. We give back to our communities – supporting over 1,300 non-profit organizations last year alone.

We don't have all the answers, but we do know how we treat people is as important as the medicines we make. We'll be talking more about what we stand for in the coming year and it won't be a one-way conversation. We'll do a lot of listening and learning, because together we can work for policies that make people healthier. That's what we stand for.

Leonard Weather Jr., R.Ph., M.D.
President

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

I am pleased to welcome you to the National Medical Association’s (NMA) 109th Annual Convention and Scientific Assembly. The theme of this year’s meeting – “Health Equity: Lead, Reform, Deliver” references the vital leadership role that the NMA, and its members, must actively play in ensuring that healthcare reform is implemented in all states in a manner that results in improved health access, services, and outcomes for all especially our most vulnerable patients. Located in the heart of the nation’s capital the Walter E. Washington Convention Center provides the perfect setting this year’s gathering of key thought leaders, scholars, practitioners, and government officials to discuss and debate these issues.

The scientific specialty sections have designed a robust educational program, for practitioners in all major specialties. Leading experts will present the latest information on the best practices and advancements in the treatment, management, and/or prevention of common – and not so common – diseases and medical conditions. I strongly encourage you to take full advantage of the multiple workshops, surgical courses, lectures, and symposia which have been developed to strengthen your practice of the art and science of medicine.

I wish to thank the NMA membership for affording me the privilege to serve as your 111th President. I count it one of the greatest honors of my life. In the tradition of the NMA presidency, this convention will highlight several of my national initiatives. I have chosen to focus Sunday morning’s Plenary Session on combating obesity in the African American community. The Plenary discussion is part of an innovative initiative launched this year entitled: “We Stand with You” NMA Physicians and their patients united for improved health for all – which is designed to address a host of clinical and health policy issues. Tuesday morning will feature a joint session on Environmental Health with a keynote from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator, Lisa Jackson. There will also be special sessions examining physician viability as well as “The Business of Medicine.”

This year the Auxiliary to the National Medical Association (ANMA) celebrates its 75th anniversary and has scheduled an extensive array of social, educational, and recreational activities that I encourage you to attend. While in Washington also take time to enjoy the city’s many attractions.

Finally, I wish to thank the many NMA members, partners, and financial supporters who participated in creating this wonderful meeting. Thank you for your strong and steadfast support of our Association and for your commitment to improving the health of our nation.

Sincerely,

Leonard Weather Jr., R.Ph., M.D.

Diabetes Management Symposium & Certification Workshop

SATURDAY, JULY 23

Room 207 B

Walter E. Washington Convention Center

Diabetes in the United States (U.S.) has reached epidemic proportions and continues to pose a major health crisis for African Americans. According to the 2011 National Diabetes Fact Sheet, 25.8 million people or 8.3% of the total U.S. population (including all ages) have diabetes, compared to 20.8 million in 2006.^{1,2} Of this total, it is estimated that 7.0 million people (increased from 5.7 million in 2007) are undiagnosed.^{1,2} Further, 4.9 million (an increase from 3.7 million in 2007), or 18.7% of all African Americans, aged 20 years or older, also have diabetes.¹ This group is twice as likely to be diagnosed with diabetes as non-Hispanic whites and has the highest age-adjusted prevalence of diabetes compared to other racial/ethnic groups.² The increase of diabetes is not limited to adults. Individuals with diabetes who do not manage their glucose levels are at increased risk for many complications including heart and blood vessel disease (i.e., hypertension, coronary heart disease, stroke), diabetic retinopathy and blindness, kidney failure, diabetic neuropathy, skin complications, depression, erectile dysfunction, dental disease and amputation.^{5,6} Hence, strategies to promote diabetes self-management to control the diabetes will contribute to reduction in the associated complications and improve quality of life.

The increasing prevalence of diabetes has a significant implication for the U.S. health system. The 2011 National Diabetes Fact Sheet states that in 2007 it was estimated that $174 billion was spent on diabetes care, which included $116 billion in direct medical costs and $58 billion for indirect costs (i.e., disability, work loss, premature mortality).² As well, when considering the additional costs of undiagnosed diabetes, pre-diabetes, and gestational diabetes, the total cost of diabetes increased to $218 billion.² The American Diabetes Association posits that the longer it takes for the undiagnosed to start receiving treatment, it could cost the U.S. for treatment and complications related to diabetes up to 30% more.⁷ Patients with diabetes who do not manage their glucose levels are at increased risk for many complications including:^{8,9}

- Heart and Blood Vessel Disease
- Blindness

- Kidney Failure
- Diabetic Neuropathy and Nerve Damage
- Skin Complications
- Depression
- Erectile Dysfunction
- Dental Disease

African Americans are at a high risk for developing diabetes. The frequency of diabetes in African-Americans is influenced by two categories of risk factors: The first is genetics and the second is medical and lifestyle risk factors, including gestational diabetes, obesity, and physical inactivity.⁸ Common risk factors include over 45 years of age, African-American descent (as well as Native Americans, Latinos, and Asians), relative (e.g., parent, brother, sister) with diabetes, diabetes during pregnancy, history of having a baby weighing over 9 pounds, high blood pressure, overweight or obesity, high cholesterol, and high triglycerides.⁹

Combating Obesity: Opportunities for Impact Evaluation, Treatment and Policy Utilizing Multidisciplinary Approach

A Program of the We Stand With You: NMA Physicians and Their Patients United for Improved Health for All Initiative

According to the Centers for Disease Control, the American society has become 'obesogenic,' characterized by environments that promote increased food intake, non healthful foods, and physical inactivity.

Research has shown that as weight increases to reach the levels referred to as "overweight" and "obesity,"* the risk for the following conditions also increases:

- Coronary heart disease
- Type 2 diabetes
- Cancers (endometrial, breast, and colon)
- Hypertension (high blood pressure)
- Dyslipidemia (for example, high total cholesterol or high levels of triglycerides)
- Stroke
- Liver and Gallbladder disease
- Sleep apnea and respiratory problems
- Osteoarthritis (a degeneration of cartilage and its underlying bone within a joint)
- Gynecological problems (abnormal menses, infertility)

Obesity rates are particularly high among African Americans (approximately 45% of adults are obese). According to the CDC of Vital Health Statistics, 60.1% of African-American males are overweight and 78% of Black women lead the population in obesity and being moderately overweight. The incidence of obesity among children aged 6-11 has more than doubled in the past 20 years, and more than tripled for adolescents aged 12-19. Children and adolescents who are overweight are more likely to be overweight or obese as adults.

There is a definitive need for physicians, healthcare professionals, nutrition, fitness/wellness experts and others to address this epidemic from a practical, culturally relevant and multifaceted approach. Further, the need for policy support, recommendations on access to care and the specific needs of minority populations.

Objectives:

1. Recognize co-morbidities associated with obesity including but not limited to: cardiometabolic syndrome, diabetes, heart disease, poor nutrition and musculoskeletal conditions.
2. Examine the role of cultural factors associated with obesity/overweight
3. Utilize current interventions including – but not limited – to lifestyle, medications and surgical interventions
4. Determine policy recommendations of the National Medical Association regarding obesity/overweight interventions
5. Discuss how multifaceted interventions can improve the health outcomes of all their patients
6. Examine social-economic determinants of health that contribute to obesity - nutrition (food deserts etc), physical activity, built environment, etc.

MONDAY, JULY 25

Room: 146 AB

Walter E. Washington Convention Center

8:00 – 11:00 Project I.M.P.A.C.T. Session

(a combined session with the Internal Medicine Section)

Increasing Diversity in Clinical Research

At a time when the passage of health care reform and its associated cost remain a topic of conversation in America, it is important that we maintain efforts through all relevant avenues to eliminate disparities of health that persist within the diverse American population. Studies have shown that African Americans are disproportionately affected by certain diseases such as prostate cancer, diabetes, heart disease, HIV/AIDS and hypertension. This requires continuation of initiatives to improve representation in clinical trials by African American and other minorities both as physician/investigators and as patient participants. Clinical trials support our understanding of the benefits as well as the risks of interventions for the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of disease.

Historically, minorities have been under-represented in clinical trials both as investigators and patients. This knowledge has initiated many discussions and investigations into its cause. Some of the reasons cited include lack of access to healthcare systems where trials are being conducted, lack of participation by their physicians, mistrust of medical research, and lack of physician and patient knowledge about clinical trials. In 1999, a National Medical Association (NMA) Consensus panel concluded that under representation of minorities in such clinical trials contributes to health disparities.

PharmaVoice reported in 2010, that “reaching under-represented populations requires new skills, new mindsets, new partners, and new competencies on the part of clinical trial team leaders. It is time to discard the one-size-fits-all mentality of recruitment and retention strategies and replace them with culturally relevant strategies and tactics to successfully recruit and retain diverse patients for clinical research.... Until companies identify and train new investigators, reflecting diverse populations, it will be difficult to expand the investigator pool and represent inclusion of all populations in clinical trials.”¹

A 2007 article titled Clinical Research in the Private Office Setting – Ethical Issues stated there is a shift away from pharmaceutical companies relying solely on academic medical centers to conduct clinical research to utilizing commercially oriented networks of physicians who conduct research in their offices.² The article stated that in 1991, 80 percent of pharmaceutical research dollar went to investigators in academic medical centers but by 1998, it had decreased to only 40 percent. A 2003 Institute of Medicine workshop report stated “The benefits of increased diversity in the clinical research workforce include increased clinical trial accrual of underrepresented minorities, more robust hypothesis generation for research questions relating to women and minority populations, and the potential for improved understanding and application of the results of clinical research to minority communities.”³

The goal of this session is to provide internal medicine physicians and other healthcare professionals with an increased awareness of clinical research, the need for more diversity among patients and investigators, share proven patient recruitment strategies, and to acquaint participants with options and resources available to conduct office based clinical research. Participants will have an opportunity to hear insights and perspectives from accomplished researchers along with experts in the business of clinical trials. Presenters will discuss the skills and requirements necessary to successfully recruit African American patients and successfully conduct clinical trials.

Objectives:

Upon completion of this session, program participants should be able to:

- a) Discuss three barriers or factors that impede patient participation in clinical trials
- b) Recall at least two examples of proven strategies for recruiting minorities to clinical trials
- c) Discuss the importance of diversity within clinical trials
- d) Explain the risks and benefits of becoming a clinical trial investigator
- e) Cite sources and resources for obtaining additional information on becoming an clinical investigator

Environmental Health

TUESDAY, JULY 26

Room: Ballroom B

9:00 – 11:00 Joint Session:
Environmental Health

The present state of environmental and infrastructural inequities (e.g. sub standard housing, air and water qualities, landfill locations and medical access in urban communities, places of color and persons living in poverty) are still at a greater risk for death and illness post natural and man made disasters.

Government grants and resultant plans continue to ignore the realities of these environmental injustices. It is imperative that any preparedness plan include steps to address the aforementioned inequities in a pre-emptive manner and also the special needs and resources of these communities.

Purpose and Learning Objectives:

- Participants will increase their knowledge of environmental injustices and its disproportionate burden on Communities of Color.
- The designing and implementing realistic plans for communities beseeched by environmental hazards
- Guidelines for assessing and treating patients and their families exposed to environmental toxins will be fully discussed as well as cultural competence and appropriateness of the present standard care
- Attendees will be fully informed on how to access tools as well as the policies necessary to enhance their ability to seek health justice for the communities they serve.

HIV/AIDS Symposium for Primary Care

TUESDAY, JULY 26

Room: 146 AB

1:00 – 2:30 HIV/AIDS Symposium

New incidence from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) 2008 show that African-American men who have sex with men (MSM) are disproportionately impacted by the HIV epidemic. Recent data also show that among young African American men who were newly diagnosed with HIV, most had seen a health-care provider in the year prior to diagnosis, but their provider had never discussed HIV/STD prevention education nor offered them testing during these visits, thereby missing crucial opportunities to engage these young men in conversations about their sexual health. In addition, fewer than 40% of providers report regularly asking their patients about their sexual history. Patients, however, report greater satisfaction when sexual topics are raised by their healthcare provider in a routine, non-judgmental manner in addition to being served a validated sexual history instrument as part of their medical encounter. Thus, implementing a tool for providers that engages their patient in a discussion about HIV/STD prevention and routinely documents a patient's sexual history. This represents a critically important step in the fight against the HIV and STD epidemics among MSM's in the United States. Clinical encounters are an important opportunity to have sexual health discussions that can lead to prevention counseling and testing for HIV and STDs.

Over the past several years new paradigms have emerged in the area of HIV prevention. Better understanding of various intervention methods (including antiretroviral therapy as prevention) and the limited success of recent HIV vaccine trials have caused a reassessment of clinical thinking. This coupled with variable success of enhanced testing efforts in different geographic areas has placed increased focus on local programs and individual clinicians to develop innovative strategies. Further, HIV infected patients are often being simultaneously managed for medical conditions that increases the complexity of their care. This combination of factors are especially important for primary and specialty clinicians to recognize and be familiar with treatment and prevention interventions.

Food and Drug Administration (FDA) Advisory Committee Workshop

3:00 – 4:30 Food and Drug Administration
(FDA) Advisory Committee
Workshop: Becoming Part of the Process

The Food and Drug Administration has 32 advisory committees with 610 members. The agency holds approximately 70 meetings each year on a range of topics. Numerous statutes and regulations govern committee operations including such things as the makeup of committees, topics brought before committees, and the role of public participants. FDA advisory committee members are also bound by financial conflict of interest statutes and regulations. The Satcher Health Leadership Institute

WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 2011

Room: 201AB

9:00 – 11:00 The Satcher Health Leadership Institute: Mental Health and The Environment: An Interactive Impact

In the quest for healthy environments and healthy communities, mental health has too often been taken for granted or even neglected. Yet, one in four Americans suffers from a diagnosable mental disorder each year and, based on World Health Organization (WHO) mental health report, the global picture is similar. Also, due to poverty, violence, and disasters we are seeing an increase in the risks of mental disorders; especially in developing countries, which tend to be disproportionately impacted.

When a parent is incarcerated, there is great disruption of family stability. Likewise, when incarcerated persons return to the home/community and their mental health needs have not been attended, it disrupts the environment of family and community.

We engage young parents (mostly single parents) in an interactive process for improving parenting, building on their base of knowledge and experiences and enhancing their parenting skills and commitment. We are convinced that such engagement promotes mental health and positive interactive environments.

One year after the passage of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, it is time to ask “where are we and where do we go from here?”

Purpose:

The purpose of this educational activity is to examine the relationship between mental health and environmental health, and to identify opportunities for intervention.

Objectives:

- Explain why mental health should not be taken for granted or neglected in our quest for health environments and healthy communities.
- Participants will be able to discuss the ways in which mental health problems can impact the environment.
- Discuss the role of quality parenting particularly in underserved, low-income predominately minority communities, as a preventive approach to promote the development and mental well-being of vulnerable at-risk children.
- Explain the significance to the environment of appropriate preparation for the eventual transition (re-entry) of some 90% of incarcerated people, many with mental disorders, back into our communities.
- Explain how health care reform impacts mental health care.

Activity Descriptions

The preliminary program activities have been carefully selected with the goal of providing a wide range of age-appropriate, educational, social and cultural experiences unique to Washington, D.C. Kama'aina Kids will work with NMA convention planners to develop a program, which is convenient for parents and conventioners, as well as enjoyable and memorable for participants. The following activity descriptions detail the Camp NMA-Zing Youth 2011 Program. Activities are subject to change due to availability in July 2011.

1. Six Flags America offers a power-packed day of entertainment. From superheroes to super rides to super entertainment, adventure awaits visitors of all ages. Seven death-defying roller coasters will satisfy our thrill-seekers, while mellow guests can select from thirty-six less dizzying options. The newest area Thomas Town, features a train ride on a Thomas the Tank Engine™, perfect for our youngest riders. Daily grand illusion magic shows and character meet-and-greets starring our favorite Looney Tunes friends are sure to heat up an already sensational day at the park!
2. A Caribbean-themed Six Flags Hurricane Harbor features one of the largest wave pools in the country, water slides, inner tube flume, lazy river, splash pool and more! Rides range from slippery slides to splashy play areas, and from the mildly thrilling to the supremely rip-roaring. Adventurous riders plunge and plummet down hydro-powered thrills like Tornado and Tony Hawk's Halfpipe. Mellow riders will be refreshed while splashing at Crocodile Cal's Caribbean Beach House or drifting lazily down Castaway Creek.
3. As a bastion of U.S. culture and history, the National Museum of American History tells America's story in terms of everyday life. Its objects have become national treasures, and can evoke feelings of awe (the desk on which Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence), affection (Dorothy's ruby slippers), or connection (Julia Child's kitchen). And some items here, like the huge original Star-Spangled Banner, evoke all three emotions at once. With highlight tours, various exhibits, daily performances and hands-on activities for children, this museum will bring history to life!
4. Located in the heart of D.C., the Smithsonian National Zoo is the famous home of the Giant Pandas (Mei Xiang and Tian Tian). Recognized as one of the premier zoological research institutions in the United States, this zoo attracts two million visitors per year. In addition to the pandas, the zoo includes a number of other well-loved attractions, including Asian Elephants, orangutans, cheetahs, tiger cubs, seals and penguins. There is also a petting zoo, which children will love.
5. Project Sun is an annual event conducted by the Auxiliary to the National Medical Association (ANMA) for youth, ages twelve and up.
6. The United States Capitol is a symbol of the American people and their government, and the meeting place of the nation's legislature. The capitol also houses an important collection of American art, and it is an architectural achievement in its own right. It is a working office building as well as a tourist attraction visited by millions every year. Begun in 1793, the Capitol has been built, burnt, rebuilt, extended and restored, so that today, it stands as a monument not only to its builders but also to the American people and their government.
7. The Great Zucchini, Washington's funniest and most magical children's entertainer, performs a colorful magic show where every child is a star and guaranteed to laugh. For over twelve years, The Great Zucchini has been entertaining young children as a magician and preschool teacher. He performs his hand-on, delightful magic shows to over 250 groups a year. The wonder of magic, silliness of comedy and interactive nature of The Great Zucchini's show will keep kids on the edge of their seats as our night comes to life!
8. Since 2005, Urban Artistry has united the talents of over fifty volunteers, acclaimed instructors and seven international organizations to link the roots of traditional music and dance to the current music and dance trends throughout the U.S. and abroad – from New York to Denmark, and from Japan to the Caribbean. Urban Artistry works toward the preservation and continuation of urban dance, music and culture through performance, competition and education. Noteworthy performances include The U.S. Embassy, the Conservatory of Korea and The Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.
9. The National Museum of Natural History is a Smithsonian Institution and one of the most visited museums in Washington. It contains more than 126 million artifacts and specimens, everything from Ice Age mammoths to the legendary Hope Diamond. This museum offers exhibits, such as dinosaur skeletons, gems, ant farms, fossil collections, an insect zoo, Ocean Hall, the world's largest African bush elephant and a Butterfly Pavilion filled with live butterflies.
10. Join Groovy Nate and his guitar for a musical adventure. An already distinguished musician and songwriter, Nate then expanded his music and talents to capture the minds and hearts of children. Incorporating puppet friends and creative instruments into playful performance, Groovy Nate will teach us to laugh and play together, explore various music genres, and be inspired to bring music and imagination into our everyday lives.
11. The Washington Nationals will bring some hard-hitting excitement in a home game at Nationals Park. Opened in 2008, the park proudly boasts panoramic views of Capitol Riverfront, Navy Yard, the surrounding city and landmarks. The concourses and seating decks are configured to create a variety of distinct neighborhoods, each with its own identity and viewing experience. Fans, young and old, will love the Exxon Strike Zone, where we get to play while we watch. This family fun area includes a Build-A-Bear Workshop, a jungle gym, PlayStation Pavilion and more. Go Nats!
12. Howard University is a federally chartered, non-profit, private, coeducation, non-sectarian, historically black university located in Washington, D.C. It has a Carnegie Classification of Institution of Higher Education status of RU/H: Research Universities (high research activity). Today it is a member school of the Thurgood Marshall Scholarship Fund and is partially funded by the U.S. Government, which gives approximately $235 million annually. From its outset it has been nonsectarian and open to people of both genders and all races. Howard has graduate schools of pharmacy, law, medicine, dentistry and divinity, in addition to the undergraduate program. Our teens, 15 and older, will get to participate in an information session and a guided campus tour.
13. National Air and Space Museum is the Smithsonian's most popular museum, which chronicles the story of the mastery of flight, from Kitty Hawk to outer space. It holds the largest collection of historic aircraft and spacecraft in the world. Everything from the Wright Brothers' Flyer and Charles Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis to World War II planes and Apollo 11 are on display here. In the Lockheed Martin IMAX Theater at National Air and Space Museum you can view one of the ever-changing films on the five-story screen. After the film, you can touch a moon rock or visit the original Star Trek model of the Enterprise. Educational exhibits introduce the ideas of aerodynamics to children and track the influence of flight technology on our culture.
14. Baba Jamal Koram the StoryMan is a leading storyteller, author, spirit, drummer, singer and performer who loves sharing stories with every age group. He has shared these stories in thousands of performances throughout the United States, in colleges and universities, in schools K – 12, at The Kennedy Center, The Lincoln Center, and at festivals and theaters. Baba Jamal is a storyteller in the African American Griot tradition, whose performances include folktales, epics, songs, riddles, proverbs, chants, drumming and much more.
15. The National Museum of the American Indian is another Smithsonian Institution, whose structure is a throwback to adobe homes in early Native American culture. With a highly naturalistic design, the NMAI illustrates Indian history within a series of circles. Various works of art, artifacts, and other remnants of American Indian culture are on display. Changing exhibits provide a valuable addition to our understanding of American Indian culture. Past exhibits have included indigenous world views through dress, native modernism, and contemporary indigenous viewpoints as told through poetry.
16. A Hip Hop Dance Party strictly for nine, ten and eleven year-olds give our young dancers a chance to shine during an exclusive Group 3 dance party. We'll start off to a hip hop beat, learning a dance choreographed by our very own staff. After a successful group performance, it's time to show off our own freestyle techniques.
17. The Teen Dance, for teens fifteen and older, is an on-site dance party for youth to unwind, express imagination and artistry, and hang out with friends. A live DJ, lighting effects, dance contests and more make this one party teens won't want to miss.
18. The Pre-Teen Dance is the same as the above, but for dancers ages twelve to fourteen.

Managing the Physician’s Business and Personal Needs in a Changing Economy “WHAT THEY DIDN’T TEACH YOU IN MEDICAL SCHOOL BUT WHAT LIFE DEMANDS THAT YOU KNOW”

Physicians have multiple needs that are outside the realm of clinical medicine. Typically, many of the NMA physicians are in group or solo practice and have to make the business decisions for their practice. However, for most physicians there was no “How to Run a Medical Practice” class or rotation that was an in-depth look into the pertinent business issues that any small business owner may face. Issues like developing a good business banking relationship, employee payroll, paying yourself, retirement plans, insurance plans for your employees and yourself, how to “market” your practice, building a website, credit card processing, choosing a billing company, and as many physicians are keenly aware—the need to choose an Electronic Medical Record (EMR) company. Even if you have an office manager; as the owner or co-owner of the practice or even if you have thoughts of starting a practice; YOU need to be aware of some simple truths, ways to avoid pitfalls, and ways to save thousands of dollars in your practice.

Additionally, physicians, no matter what their practice type, need to know about retirement, real estate developing banking relationships and understanding how to navigate your personal finances in a changing economy. This intensive and effective workshop will truly be a “crash” course for physicians in business matters. The NMA has brought together leading experts from around the country to share their expertise with YOU! A lively question and answer session will follow the panel discussion and we have arranged for several “surprises” to reward the physician that dares to take a step into the business world. They may not have taught it in medical school, but the NMA has brought together experts who will give you the tools that you need in 2011 and beyond!
